BACKGROUND:
The Associated Press began conducting a poll for the college division for men's basketball on Jan. 5, 1961. The rankings consisted of colleges and universities that were members of NCAA College Division and/or NAIA. A panel of sportswriters and sports broadcasters voted for the top 10 teams from 1961 through the final poll of the 1967-68 season. The poll was expanded to a Top 20 from 1968-69 through 1970-71, then reverted back to a Top 10 for the two seasons that followed. In the 1973-74 and 1974-75 seasons, the poll was extended to rank the top 15 teams.

The Associated Press poll was discontinued after the 1974-75 season after the NCAA split the college division into Division II and III. At that time, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) took over the compilation of the weekly poll. The chairmen of each of the eight NCAA Division II regions ranked the top 15 teams starting with the 1975-76 season, then expanded that to 20 teams in the 1980-81 season. The NCAA continued to conduct the poll until the end of the 1996-97 season.

Starting in the 1997-98 season, Division II Bulletin, headed by Gary Rubin, took over the poll and ranked the top 25 teams in NCAA Division II. That continued until the duties of conducting the poll were shifted to the National Association of Basketball Coaches Division II Congress after the 2003-04 season. In each of the next seven seasons, the poll has been determined by a group of eight coaches, one representing each of the NCAA Division II regions; beginning in 2012-13, the group was expanded to two coaches per region.

In 2014-15, a second poll was started and conducted by a group of 16 sports information directors (two per region) from NCAA Division II institutions.

From 1957-74, United Press International conducted rankings for small colleges, which also included institutions affiliated with the NAIA. The weekly rankings for those seasons are listed at the end of this document.

The data for this project was compiled by Roy Pickerill, Sports Information Director at Kentucky Wesleyan College; and John Kean, Sports Information Director at Missouri S&T. Following are the weekly polls since 1961, as well as breakdowns on a week-by-week, year-by-year and institution-by-institution basis.
